

Reality is Real

The reality is that Reality is real.

By definition reality is real.

Yet in a relative dual reality world, an unreal reality exists.

I can choose my reality to be real or unreal.

The real Reality is Absolute.

It is absolutely real.

An absolute reality is unchanging.

A relative reality allows choice.

One choice is relative to another choice.

One's choice is relative to another's choice.

One's reality is relative to another reality and another's reality.

Realities are contiguous, continuous and sequential.

They are consequential, being the consequence of individual & collective thought.

My reality is what I believe to be true.

What I believe to be true is what I experience because what I experience confirms what I believe to be true.

What I believe to be true is real for me.

It is my reality.

My reality is continually changing as through my experience of life, I change my mind about what is my Real Reality.

Life is a project.

Life is a Project to experience.

My experience is a projection of my reality.

My reality is an expression of my beliefs.

My beliefs create my reality.

I experience the reality of my own creation.

I create my reality as a projection of my own beliefs.

I believe that the life that I experience is real.

It is a real expression of my thoughts.

My reality is a projection of my thoughts.

Through my thoughts, I project my reality into existence.

I exist to experience my expression of my creation of reality.

I cause my expression of my beliefs to be projected into reality.

I am at cause.

I cause my reality to occur.

I am the cause of my own experience of life.

I cause my reality to be real.

Unless I realise that I cause my reality, I will realise my reality unconsciously.

My unconscious Real Self creates the opportunities for reality that my ego Self experiences.

My Real Self is never lost.

In my confusion & frustration, I imagine my Self to be very lost.

When I have lost the cause of my reality, I become a lost cause.

My Soul does not cause my Self to be lost.

My Soul's choice is for my Self to find my Self.

Being a lost cause is unfounded.

A cause is never lost, just unimagined.

Whatever reality I can imagine, I will cause to be realised and eventually experience.

Keith Collins

The Inner Coach

November 2012

theinnercoach@me.com

<http://www.theinnercoach.eu>