

Three Perspectives of Reality

My Perspective of Reality can be Absolute, Relative or Divine.

My perspective of the absolute sees the big picture of everything as 'we'.

We are collectively all that is.

The one version of everything is 'us'.

There is no 'I', 'you', or 'they'.

My perspective of the relative sees 'you' separate from 'me' and 'they' as separate from 'us'.

We become relative to each other, separate yet attached, individual yet collective.

The one version of everything that is universal energy becomes many versions of individual reality through personal choice.

My perspective of the divine overcomes the duality of relative existence so that all choices are experienced as beneficial for the growth & expansion of the whole.

It allows the choice of the One to be expressed in an infinite number of possible ways that are always experienced as being beneficial, which is divine.

The Perspective of the Absolute

From an Absolute Perspective, life is absolute.

Absolute life has no requirement for love or light.

It has no experience of individual thought or emotion.

It has no personal choice, as everything is absolute.

There is no space or time in which reality exists.

Life is an infinite, eternal & continuous experience of absolute Oneness.

Nothing is in opposition to anything.

Everything is in harmony with everything that is.

Everything has no duality of nothing.

Nothing does not exist, neither does anything.

In absolute reality, energy has a pure vibration, motion is constant, and there is no matter.

Energy is absolutely pure energy with no distinction of form.

Pure energy has absolutely no form and no physical perspective.

It is pure Consciousness, which is pure thought.

The Perspective of the Relative

The perspective of a relative life is a choice.

The choice exists for my life to be relative or absolute.

A choice of relative existence allows everything to be One or One can be anything & everything.

From a relative perspective, all possibilities exist.

Nothing becomes impossible.

A relative perspective that allows choice, allows creativity & growth.

Life has the ability to expand & grow, as well as the ability to contract & die.

Life & death are both part of the contract for growth.

Relative life allows the experience of extremes of reality, where matter can be manifested in the form of energy in varying degrees of motion, in an infinite number of ways, at any time and in any space.

The Perspective of the Divine

The Perspective of the Divine is the 3rd way of looking at anything.

A singular view of reality has no choice.

A dual reality view has a choice of two options.

A triune view of reality always sees the divine choice as a third way.

A divine choice is always a divine experience.

When I see life from a divine perspective, I experience life in a divine way.

Life becomes an expression of my own Divinity when I choose the third way.

A divine perspective has no duality and no singularity; it is a triality.

I am here to trial the reality of a divine experience.

A divine life requires a divine perspective of life by seeing and choosing a third way.

I always have a choice of perspective and my choice of perspective creates the reality of my experience, which is my experience of reality.
